THE CHILDREN (AMENDMENT) BILL, 2009

Explanatory Note

(These notes form no part of the Bill but are intended only to indicate its general purport)

The Bill seeks to repeal and replace the Children Act, Chap. 46:01.

PART I—Preliminary

Clauses 1 and 2 would provide for the short title and interpretation. Clause 2 includes the definition of the terms “touching”, “sexual” and “sexual penetration of a child”. “Child” is also defined as a person under the age of eighteen years.

Clause 3 would provide for the guiding principles for parents in relation to children and describe the rights and responsibilities of children which are set out in the Second Schedule to the Bill.

PART II—Prevention of cruelty to children

Clause 4 would provide for the offence of cruelty to children.

Clause 5 would provide for the offence of suffocation of infants less than three years of age whilst in bed or in another place of rest with a person over the age of sixteen years.

PART III—Offences in relation to begging, risk of burning, firearm and ammunition

Clause 6 would provide for the offence of begging, the burden of proof being placed on the person charged, once it is proved that the child was in a street, premises or place for any of the purposes outlined in this section.

Clause 7 would provide for the offence of exposing children to the risk of burning and would make a distinction in the penalties between harm and serious or grievous bodily harm.

Clause 8 would provide for the offence of injury or death by a firearm or ammunition, whilst clause 9 would provide for the offence of giving, selling or renting firearm to a child.

PART IV—Abuse of children through prostitution

Clause 10 would provide for the offence of allowing children to frequent brothels. This provision would not affect the liability of such a person to be charged under section 21 of the Sexual Offences Act.

Clause 11 would provide for the offence of causing, encouraging or favouring the seduction, prostitution or unlawful carnal knowledge of a child. If the offence is committed with the knowledge of a parent or guardian of the child, the Court may require the parent or guardian to enter into a recognizance for a period of not more than eight years.

Clause 12 would provide for the offence of intentionally obtaining whether for oneself or another person, the sexual services of a child.

Clause 13 would provide for the offence of causing or inciting a child to become a prostitute in any part of the world. Further, clauses 14 and 15 would provide for the offences of controlling a child prostitute in any part of the world and arranging or facilitating child prostitution in any part of the world, respectively.

Clause 16 would provide for the definition of “prostitute”.

PART V—Other sexual offences

Clause 17 would provide for the offence of intentional sexual penetration of a child less than fourteen years of age. Where the perpetrator is eighteen years or over, the penalty is life imprisonment.

Clause 18 would provide for the offence of sexual penetration of a child who is over fourteen years but less than eighteen years of age.

Clause 19 would provide for the offence of sexual “touching”, as defined in clause 2 of the Bill. It also provides for more severe penalties where the touching amounts to sexual penetration.

Clause 20 would provide for the offence of sexual “touching” where perpetrated by persons in a position of trust in relation to the child, as defined in section 34(1) of the Bill. There are more severe penalties for this offence than for the offence of sexual “touching” in clause 19. There is also a rebuttable presumption that the person knew or could reasonably be expected to have known that he was in a position of trust in relation to the child.

Clause 21 would provide for a similar offence of sexual “touching” except that this offence would apply to a person in a familial relationship, as defined by section 40 of the bill, with the child. Again, there are more severe penalties for this offence than the offence of sexual “touching” simpliciter. Both clauses 20 and 21 provide for more severe penalties where the touching amounts to “sexual penetration” as defined in clause 2 of the Bill.

Clause 22 would provide for the offence of causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity, as defined in clause 2 of the Bill, with another person. Where sexual penetration of the child occurs, a more severe penalty is to be imposed.

Clauses 23 and 24 would provide for the offences of causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity where the perpetrator is in a position of trust or has a familial relationship in relation to the child.

Clauses 25 to 27 would provide for offences relating to engaging in sexual activity in the presence of a child. Clauses 26 and 27 would apply in the case where the perpetrator is in a position of trust or a familial relationship with the child.

Clauses 28 to 30 would provide for the offences of causing a child to watch a sexual act for sexual gratification. Clauses 29 and 30 would apply where the perpetrator is in a position of trust or a familial relationship with the child, respectively.

Clauses 31 to 33 would provide for offences relating to meeting a child following sexual grooming. Clauses 32 and 33 would apply where the perpetrator is in a position of trust or a familial relationship with the child, respectively.

Clause 34 would set out a list of the categories of persons who, for the purposes of the Bill, would be considered to be in positions of trust in relation to a child and clause 35 would further define those positions set out in clause 34.

Clauses 36 and 37 would provide for the marriage exception and proceedings with respect to the same, in relation to the offences specified in that clause. It would be a defence that the defendant was, at the time of the conduct, lawfully married to the child.

Clauses 38 and 39 would provide for a defence, for the offences referred to in that clause, where the defendant and the child had a sexual relationship which predates the position of trust and proceedings with respect to the same.

Clauses 40 would provide the interpretation of “familial relationships” for the purposes of the Bill while clause 41 would further define 41.

Clause 42 would provide that the Court may, with respect to any child who has been the victim of an offence under the Act, for which this is the Bill, make certain orders for the welfare of the child.

Clause 75 would provide for the admissibility of the deposition and recorded evidence referred to in clause 74, without further proof, on the evidence of a duly qualified practitioner or the Director of Public Prosecutions, that the attendance before the Court of any child in respect of whom an offence is alleged to have been committed would involve a danger to the life or physical, mental or psychological health of the child or place the child at risk of harm.
